

Inês Amorim (candidate to RR for Portugal)

(inesamorimflup@gmail.com), https://sigarra.up.pt/flup/pt/func_geral.formview?p_codigo=214899

I have been an ESEH member since 2003 and have recently served as a member of the selection committee for the society's Biannual Conference. My interest in EH arises from my main research experience in maritime history, with a special focus on fisheries and salt, in the Atlantic world of the early modern and modern age. In the last two years especially, have been active in the creation of a Portuguese informal network of environmental historians, also connected to the larger community of Portuguese-speaking environmental historians, co-organizing an international meeting in Coimbra (march of 2012), whose proceedings I have also co-edited, and participating in a number of EH initiatives in Lisbon, Porto, and Algarve. I have been especially active in making connections between scholars in different disciplinary fields – rural history, maritime history, economic history, climatology and geography – and the ESEH, so contributing to the increased number of submissions from Portugal for the next ESEH conference in Munich, and consequently to the increased number of ESEH members from this country. I would be happy to serve as RR in order to help consolidate this emerging Portuguese EH community.
